PROPOSITION

Sindhusthan, a vast and geographically diverse country ranging from the Himalayan heights to tropical rain forests. The country experiences a predominantly tropical climate. It has interior regions showing a mix of wet and dry tropical weather. The northern parts have a humid tropical climate.

In the southern part of Sindhusthan lies Nammanagara. It is the eighth-largest state by population. It has over 61 million residents spread across 31 districts. Its capital, Kaveripura, known as the IT hub of Sindhusthan. It has a population of 13.6 million in 2024, with migrants comprising 50.6% of this number. Kaveripura's water needs are primarily met by the Tethys River, groundwater, and a few water bodies, with recycled water from sewage treatment plants used for non-potable purposes.

However, in recent years, Kaveripura has faced severe water shortages. The city's extensive urbanization has reduced the natural ground's ability to absorb rainwater, resulting in significant runoff lost to stormwater drains. The year 2024 has brought the worst drought in 30 to 40 years, drastically affecting the water supply. The Sindhusthan Institute of Science reported that Kaveripura's water surface area has shrunk from 2,324 hectares in 1973 to a fraction of that today due to rampant urbanization and encroachment on water bodies. Almost all remaining lakes are either encroached upon or contaminated with untreated sewage and industrial effluents, severely impacting the groundwater.

For the past three months, the water crisis has severely disrupted daily life. Drinking water is scarce, and the price of tanker-supplied water has increased from Rs. 1,000 to Rs. 2,000. Residents of housing societies like Eagle City have resorted to using nearby malls' restrooms. Hospitals, such as Sky Hospital, struggle to secure the 24,000 liters of water needed daily, along with 5,000 liters for their dialysis unit, forcing them to rely on recycled water. Some schools have been closed temporarily due to lack of potable and even non-potable water.

Under immense pressure, the Government of Nammanagara issued a notification on February 29, 2024, directing non-domiciled residents who had moved to Kaveripura after March 1, 2018, to return to their hometowns and work from there. This move aimed to alleviate the city's water demand during the anticipated severe summer. However, this decision disproportionately affected Kaveripura's large migrant workforce, which includes over 4 million skilled IT professionals and around 4.2 million unskilled laborers.

Two organizations, the Nammanagara Unskilled Workers Association (NUWS) and the Techies Society of Kaveripura (TSK), filed a Public Interest Litigation (PIL) in the High Court of Nammanagara. They argued that the notification violated their fundamental rights under Articles 14, 19(1)(d), 19(1)(g), 21, and 21A of the Sindhusthan Constitution. They claimed the order was unreasonable, unconstitutional, and discriminatory. Additionally, they highlighted the economic hardships faced by workers. They are forced to leave or to continue paying rent without residing in the city. The High Court dismissed the PIL, justifying the notification as a reasonable classification under the Constitution. Dissatisfied, NUWS and TSK appealed to the Supreme Court of Sindhusthan.

The problem is made worse by the pollution and encroachment that Kaveripura's water bodies, including Betakere Lake, have experienced. The lake was formerly abundant in plants and animals, but unlawful building, rubbish disposal, and sewage outflow have severely contaminated it. An environmentalist named Dr. Vikram Rathod filed a Public Interest Litigation (PIL) under Article 48A of the Constitution against the state and municipal government. The renewal of the lake was mandated by the High Court, although it made no mention of the need to remove unauthorized structures or the unenforceability of Article 48A. Dr. Rathod filed an appeal with the Supreme Court, claiming that if these structures were left in place, the lake's state would deteriorate and the city's water shortage would get worse. He also appealed that non-enforceability of the directive principles has entitled the government machineries to turn a blind eye to the Part IV of the constitution though under Article 37; "DPSPs are fundamental in the governance of the country and it shall be the duty of the state to apply these principles in making laws".

Another significant water body, Kavi Lake, has also deteriorated in the drought. Once a pristine, rainfed lake, it was leased to Maya Naturals Pvt Ltd (MNPL) a mining company, by the state government for a period of 100 years which expires in 2060. The ongoing droughts has brought an outcry to retake possession of the lake to be used towards public benefit while the company claims it is essential to its operations and it has made significant investments towards the restoration and maintenance of the lake. The state government has sought legal advice from the High Court towards the early termination of the lease due to unprecedented circumstances and issued a notice to Maya Naturals Pvt Ltd (MNPL) for the same. The company challenged the same and the suit is pending under the High Court of Nammanagara. The Supreme Court of Sindhusthan has clubbed these three cases recognizing a possible same substantial question of law. The matter is to be heard by a constitutional bench.

NOTE: Laws in Sindhusthan are in pari materia with Indian laws.

ISSUES

1. Whether the Supreme Court is within its powers to club the three separate suits under the powers conferred to it by the constitution?
2. Whether the notification dated 29th February 2024, directing all non-domiciled individuals to return to their hometowns, violates the fundamental rights guaranteed under the Constitution of Sindhusthan, specifically Articles 14, 19(1)(d), 19(1)(g), 21, and 21A?
3. Whether the authorities have failed in their duty to protect and preserve Betakere Lake and whether the High Court's order provides a resolution to the situation. Additionally, has the non-enforceability of the DPSPs led Part IV of the constitution to be in practice, obsolete?
4. Whether the lease of Kavi Lake to Maya Naturals Pvt Ltd and an early termination of the same due to the ongoing drought is legal when the state has in fact failed to protect the many lakes within its dominion?
